Weaving on Manipulated Gourds

By Cecile Garrison

So, what to do with all those gourds I manipulated into weird and unusual shapes? It Just so happens a very talented Weaver, Toni Best lives just over the river and down the street from me!

Toni and I put our heads together and produced a fun class attended by students eager to learn weaving, "floating" and winding around all those curves!

Some of this year's crop of manipulated gourds will be used in a class Toni will be teaching at the bi-annual conference held in Visalia next April.

I hope many artists will give weaving on manipulating gourds a try!

Inside this issue:		President's Message
President's Message	2	It is definitely fair season. Some fairs are over already, some are going on now and others haven't started yet. I've heard so many good reports of gourd categories in the county fairs. Keep up the good work in supporting your local fair so they continue to have a gourd division. Efforts are being made to get county fairs to include gourds in their fine arts division. Many of our CGS members' art work is fine art quality. I didn't make it to the California State Fair this year but I was told that there were many wonderful gourd entries. Special recognition goes to Marilyn Carrico, a CGS member of the Folsom Gourd Artists, who won "Best of Division" and received the $100 Special Award from the California Gourd Society. A big thank you to Barbara Rippetoe and her helpers for their presence in the farm area throughout the duration of the fair. The fair again welcomed gourds being planted in the Spring so there were gourd plants in several areas with many gourds on the vines from babies to well matured gourds. So many visitors were introduced to gourds and gourd art. Our CGS gourd competitions are soon to be here. Heads up for a new festival and CGS gourd competition at the Amador Flower Farm in September. Then in October the Calabash Club of Silicon Valley is sponsoring a Festival at the Uesugi Farms in San Martin. The following weekend there's a gourd competition in Southern California in conjunction with the woodcarvers in Santa Ana. More details are on our website and elsewhere in this newsletter. I will be at all three events so come by and visit. I'm excited about the Baskets and Gourds of Our Culture event in April of 2020. There will be many wonderful classes offered as well as a great program. Our CGS raffle of mosaics will be held at the banquet. Hopefully your patch has already discussed and chosen a theme for your mosaic. Many patches have indicated that they are making more than one. I can hardly wait to see them all. Well, keep those creative juices flowing and remember any gourd that you entered in a county or the state fair can also be entered in one of the CGS competitions as long as it hasn't already been entered in a CGS competition in a previous year. Come out to the competitions and festivals. Support the patches that have worked so hard to put these events on. I'll see you there! Your president, Olive Moore

Folsom Gourd Artists

Fundraiser for 20/20 Vision of Gourds Festival

All the critters you see here were made by our members for a fundraiser for the groups festival next June.

The two dolls were made by Colleen Ballard.

They were also busy at the California State Fair manning the gourd booth, talking and demoing for the attendees, teaching them all about gourds before the fair ended the 28th of July.

The Amador Artists are busy getting ready for their Gourd and Fine Art Festival on Sept 6-8th. Local groups are helping with that.

EL GOURDO'S RAMBLINGS

Hello! Hello! Wake up! Paging EG, paging EG. My how time flies. It is time for another “Rambling” already. OMG! Time to pull myself off the couch and get to writing. Okay, okay, I’m awake now.

This is beginning to be a very exciting time for me. You fellow Gourdaholics will sympathize with me I’m sure. YESSS! FESTIVAL TIME! The time when we rejuvenate our inner souls by immersing into the great gourd culture through gourd festivities, learning, sharing and working to make our creations all they can be. AAAH! Bear with me a minute while these fun thoughts swirl and dance about my head. Yes; visions of celebration, camaraderie, immersing in and sharing our fun culture with old friends, new friends and those soon to be fellow gourdiees and even newer new friends. It is a time where our relationships with both people and gourds grow and our wonderful art too in many ways. Yep its GOURD time! ARE YOU READY TO GOURD ON?

This month I hope to not only share good things about some of our members around the state but to perhaps provoke a little different take on our culture— look at our wonderful gourd world; perhaps venture a little deeper into another area. More on that later.

Back to Gourd time and fun. Yay!

That Barbara Rippetoe is back at it. She dazzled the gourd world with her great team and with her amazing history of gourds. This was displayed at a special location dedicated to gourds for all 17 days of the STATE FAIR. By the time this comes to print the big show will be over and many new fans will have been touched by the gourd bug. Some of my friends up North report back that it is another successful event. Kudos you all.

Calabash is gearing up big time with their steadily growing event. Great location and lots of fans participating. Their October event just a week apart from the SOCAL event where the Orange County Gourd patch teams up with the Woodcarvers in Santa Ana. Competition, vendors and fun galore. Can’t wait – might try to do them both.

Of course another one I’m keeping my eye on as I mentioned last issue is the NORCAL event at the Amador Flower Farm. It is held in partnership with the Amador Gourd Artists and will be known as the Amador Flower Farm Gourd and Fine Art Festival. My dear friend and her husband are very involved in it and that is my main information source. Of course she doesn’t know my secret Identity is “El Gourdo”. As I told you before I am particularly excited about this event. It is one of my favorite spots in NORCAL with that amazing farm, beautiful valley, great activities, and of course some of the finest wine in the state. There will be tram rides winding back and forth through these phenomenal gardens from venue to venue. Look it up on the new website; AmadorGourdArtists.com

And Silver State will be right over the hill in Carson NV a week later. A must do. There are many events I’m missing here so go to our CGS site to get updated.

I have noticed the one biggest factor in making events a success lies not necessarily in the leadership, or even the team that plans these events. Those good folks are critical to the success of any event but all their great efforts are compromised if they don’t have volunteers. Smiling, happy, team spirited and excited volunteers are the ones we can best measure success by. And guess what? Since there are few if any paid positions we are all volunteers in some form or fashion. Volunteers make our world rock.

I am still very eager to learn of some of our silent heroes in the California gourd world and am soliciting your help always. We all know somebody who does so much to promote gourds in so many ways. These good folks I titled “Heroes” by being involved and whose efforts are selfless with intent to better the gourd world they live in. Yes; the same ones who are the first to VOLUNTEER. While most of them are too modest and shy it is our job to identify them and give them a pat on the back and thanks for what they do. Of course we can start right off with the amazing Patch leaders and their teams who support their efforts.

Good idea; but I don't know enough about any of them to do justice to their efforts. BUT YOU DO! Send me info at my email address ElGourdoArt@gmail.com. There are so many.

For instance, Susan Sullivan in nearby Orange County who was the founder of that patch as I understand. She is one I see everywhere: North, South, Casa Grande, right in the middle of the gourd world. Don't know her well enough to write a comprehensive story deserving of all she has meant to our world. Help!! Another one in the SOCAL neighborhood, Jack Thorpe; I've seen him everywhere and know only just a few of his many contributions including being a Senior and highly regarded AGS Judge. He and his great buddy Bill Duncan are Judge Instructors, both great guys, Master artists—and they are MEN!

And another I hear great things about is Mary Lou Linton who is in the South, in the San Diego area. She and her amazing family do classes, fund raisers and are involved with the Native American community sharing our art. Again, an amazing person, doing amazing works—you guessed it. I know too little to do her justice.

Early in this article I mentioned looking at our gourd world with different colored glasses. First of all, there's not much I would want to see changed but one of the things that might bear constant revisiting and minor updates is Judging. For one thing I really agree with the three judge and point system. Another thing I really like and have seen at a couple of other venues around the country is the first impression or WOW! Factor. I think that should weigh significantly on the judging and probably does in most cases. Do we sometimes get too caught up in the fine point of the guidelines? For example, on a couple of occasions I've seen gourds basically disqualified because they were too covered with embellishments, clays, etc. not allowing enough gourd to be seen. Question: If a gourd is open and you can see inside, is not the outside 50% and the inside 50%? Just wondering. I guess my point here is it appears competitions are having difficulty getting the number of entries we have enjoyed in past events.

Some of that at times may be that our guidelines are restrictive to the point that folks who would normally enter just throw their hands up and not go to the trouble. Frankly folks I am getting bored with same-o, same-o. I'm seeing more and more competitions that have no/zero entries in certain categories. These are in many cases some of the old-time honored categories that have served us so well in the past. The most loaded categories I'm seeing are the ones that say "other", or "Surprise us" indicating that it's wide open to use any medium or combination of mediums you so desire. I'm wondering if we could do that and have multi medium categories that might call for "Wildlife" which could be any plant, animal, bird, etc. Could we go further and have a "Cultural category which could be all inclusive, like Native American, African, Amish, Farm Culture, break dancers, okay I might be getting a little wild now but my point is, open it up a little to encourage originality and creativity.

Oh I have many ideas, some of which may have a little merit and others which may be hung up to pin a donkey tail on. My fear is if something is not working then analyze it and fix it if we can. Or we can continue over and over with the same results. As a side note both Sylvia Nelson from up North and Betty Finch now residing in Tennessee have gone to my EG website and brought up suggestions that maybe I could start some discussion regarding our competitions.

First I ran into Sylvia up north on one of my wine excursions and hearing she is both a AGS Judge and Judge instructor we began discussing competitions and my take is that in some cases they seem to be getting stagnant. She agreed and being the progressive person she is wants to make some positive changes to improve this. And further, when I went to Betty Finch's gallery event in Tehachapi a few short months ago we had a discussion regarding competitions and Betty thought we should see what categories fill up or have significant participation and if a category goes unfilled for two years, replace it. She also suggested that a crafted manipulated gourd category would force creativity to a new level. There are manipulated gourds out there for sale she says, just waiting to become something spectacular. And she says the majority of participants are men. (Editorial note: Calabash competition has a manipulated gourd category this year.) Hmmm. Well it looks like I now have to give both Betty and Sylvia my secret clues as to my identity. If they read this, I think my cover will be broken so I must swear them to secrecy.

Understand this: I have no position or authority to make any changes and would never want to without the efforts and support of the masses. We are not in dire trouble methinks but warning signs are appearing that might indicate some positive changes are needed on the not too distant horizon.

I would love to hear your thinking on this. You all have my El Gourdo email above and I welcome any input regarding anything I write or what you feel can help maintain the health of our gourd world.

As an added initiative (yuk, yuk) I will give major clues as to my real identity to the first three people who respond in any way to my website. And in the next EG Rambling I will try to post a picture of myself thus risking the exposure of my true identity.

I welcome all comments, even: "EG I know you were indulging in that adult grape enhanced beverage while writing this article. What were you thinking?"

Until next time my dears—GOURD ON!!

Last issue I had a quote from the famous Einstein about "Creativity"

This issue will end the same with a quote from a lesser known celebrity

"If you are on the couch, put down your beer, get off your r— and create something that will make you cheer, then go out and VOLUNTEER".
